“Mirrored” Plans

Effective October 1, 2003, building plans must accurately represent the orientation of structures on property. Past practice of accepting plans that will be “mirrored” on site is being discontinued after October 1, 2003 due to multiple field errors, which have resulted in increased costs, inspection difficulties, and increased construction time.

Designers are encouraged to provide both sets of plans in advance when the possibility of using the plan as “reversed”, or “mirrored” is being considered.
