{NOTE: this (S-1) version is written without legislative drafting markup from the original AO text, except to the title from the original AO, it is presented as a new ordinance. See the AM for summary of changes}

AN ORDINANCE OF THE ANCHORAGE MUNICIPAL ASSEMBLY AMENDING ANCHORAGE MUNICIPAL CODE CHAPTER 4.50 TO ENACT A NEW SECTION 4.50.120 AND ESTABLISH THE ANCHORAGE PUBLIC SAFETY PARTNERSHIP COMMISSION.

WHEREAS, public safety in the Municipality of Anchorage includes the coordinated work of the Anchorage Police Department, Anchorage Fire Department, the Municipal Attorney's Criminal Division, emergency response services, and the Anchorage Health Department, and encompasses responses to crime, behavioral health needs, homelessness, substance use, and overall community well-being; and

WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly established a Public Safety Advisory Commission in May 1995 to provide a forum for community input and advice on matters of public safety; and

WHEREAS, for many years the commission served the Municipality as a venue for community engagement, dialogue, and collaboration on public safety issues; and

WHEREAS, over time, concerns emerged that the commission was not consistently reflecting the diversity and broad perspectives of the Anchorage community or functioning in a way that fully met the evolving needs of the Municipality and the public; and

WHEREAS, an opportunity has emerged to better reflect the full diversity and broad perspectives of the Anchorage community and to evolve the commission's structure to meet the Municipality's changing needs; and

WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly allowed the commission to sunset and terminate on January 31, 2024, to create space for thoughtful redesign and renewed community engagement; and

WHEREAS, Anchorage does not have a consistent, structured, and accessible forum within local government for community voices and dialogue on public safety issues; and

WHEREAS, the Municipality has multiple boards and commissions focused on public health, including the Housing, Homeless and Neighborhood Development Commission, the Municipal Health and Human Services commission, and the

Emergency Medical Service Board; and

WHEREAS, in recent years, Anchorage has experienced heightened public concern regarding public safety, including but not limited to Missing and Murdered Indigenous Persons, officer-involved shootings, substance use challenges such as fentanyl, other opioids, methamphetamines, and other drugs, domestic violence, sexual assault, child maltreatment, interpersonal violence, property crime, and other community safety issues, which have contributed to increased strain on relationships between the public and public safety systems; and

WHEREAS, community members have expressed a desire for greater transparency, communication, and meaningful opportunities to engage with public safety agencies, and have worked with the Municipality in a shared effort to create a community-focused public safety body designed to help the community and public safety agencies learn from one another, understand emerging challenges, identify opportunities for improvement, and continuously strengthen the systems that keep Anchorage safe; and

WHEREAS, in response, the Anchorage Assembly established a Public Safety Task Force through AR 2025-111 to engage community members, municipal partners, and stakeholders in reimagining a public safety commission, understand our current public safety systems, consider various alternative models, and develop recommendations to the Assembly and Administration; and

WHEREAS, the Task Force conducted a six-month public process from June to December 2025 that included meetings, workshops, panels, written feedback, and direct engagement with community members, including individuals with lived experience, to inform its recommendations; and

WHEREAS, throughout the Task Force process, the Assembly received regular updates via Assembly Information Memorandums (AIM 153-2025, AIM 166-2025, AIM 213-2025), as well as a final report with the Task Force's recommendations (AIM 249-2025(A)); and

WHEREAS, the Task Force identified the importance of creating a commission that is community-led, independent in perspective, and capable of strengthening transparency, accountability, and trust between the public and local public safety systems; and

WHEREAS, the Task Force recommendations included a range of potential authorities for such a commission, reflecting a desire for a more robust oversight and accountability role in policy development and review, alongside advisory and community engagement functions, as well as diverse representation on the commission that meaningfully reflects the whole community; and

WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly has carefully considered these recommendations alongside legal, operational, and sustainability considerations, including the role of volunteer commissioners, the structure of existing municipal systems, and the importance of maintaining clear boundaries with respect to personnel matters and active investigations; and

1 WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly finds that a balanced model—emphasizing
2 advisory functions, robust community engagement, system-level review, and the
3 ability to recommend independent evaluations—will provide meaningful
4 accountability while ensuring clarity of roles, maintaining public trust, and supporting
5 effective public safety operations; and

6
7 WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly further finds that strengthening public safety
8 requires both accountability and collaboration, and that trust is built through 9 transparency, communication, and sustained community engagement; and

10
11 WHEREAS, the Anchorage Assembly further finds that any new commission will 12 need to take a broad interest in public safety, shifting its focus among the various 13 public safety agencies while still responding to the immediate needs of the 14 community; and

15
16 WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the Municipality of Anchorage to establish a
17 reimagined Anchorage Public Safety Partnership Commission that reflects these 18 principles and provides a collaborative, durable, community-informed structure for 19 engagement, review, and advisory input on public safety systems that brings 20 community voices into decisions early, and fosters transparency through regular 21 public engagement; now, therefore,

LAID-ON-THE-TABLE
MUNICIPALITY OF ANCHORAGE
ASSEMBLY MEMORANDUM
No. AM XXX-2026

Meeting Date: July 7, 2026

From: Assembly Chair Anna Brawley
Assembly Member Kameron Perez-Verdia

Subject: AO 2026-62(S-1) – AN ORDINANCE OF THE ANCHORAGE
MUNICIPAL ASSEMBLY AMENDING ANCHORAGE MUNICIPAL CODE CHAPTER 4.50 TO ENACT A NEW SECTION 4.50.120 AND
ESTABLISH THE ANCHORAGE PUBLIC SAFETY PARTNERSHIP COMMISSION.

The S-1 substitute reflects extensive work over the past year and incorporates feedback received from the Public Safety Task Force, community members, public safety departments, subject matter experts, and Assembly colleagues. Those conversations helped refine both the purpose of the commission and the role it should serve within Anchorage's public safety system.

The S-1 is presented as a clean substitute to make review of the ordinance easier. A crosswalk table is included to summarize changes among the versions, including some sections which were restored from the original version in the S-1 version.

Vision

The S-1 reflects an approach that differs from what was originally envisioned at either end of the spectrum, from not having any board or commission specifically focused on public safety issues, to an independent commission with its own authority. Some community members advocated for a civilian oversight commission, whose functions include investigative authority and subpoena power to take action in specific cases involving law enforcement officers, while others questioned whether a permanent commission was needed. The sponsors believe the S-1 version strikes a balance by establishing a permanent, community-led Public Safety Partnership Commission focused on dialogue, transparency, community engagement, education, and continuous improvement across Anchorage's public safety systems. Rather than serving as an investigative body designed to take reactive or restorative action in specific personnel issues, the commission is intended to be a broad, systems-focused advisory group of community members whose purpose is to strengthen relationships between the community and public safety agencies by creating an ongoing forum for discussion, information-sharing, and recommendations.

The ordinance also recognizes that public safety extends beyond policing alone. Behavioral health, crisis response, substance misuse and drug distribution, homelessness, fire and emergency medical services, emergency management, violence prevention, prosecution, and law enforcement all influence one another. The commission is designed to provide a venue where these interconnected issues can be considered together.

Findings

The S-1 restores much of the original findings language that was removed in the S version. These findings acknowledge the circumstances that prompted the creation of the commission while emphasizing that its work is intended to address the broader public safety system rather than any single issue.

The findings also more clearly articulate the commission's purpose: strengthening relationships between the community and public safety agencies, increasing transparency, incorporating community perspectives into public safety discussions, and creating a permanent process for learning and continuous improvement.

Governance

The S-1 includes several governance changes from the S version:

- Retains the name Public Safety Partnership Commission.
- Returns Administration representatives to ex officio, non-voting status;
- Removes the Vice Chair position as a specified seat (commission leadership will be decided by members);
- Removes reference to the prosecutor's seat to be possibly filled by State of Alaska Department of Law, and clarifies it must be someone with the Municipal Attorney's Office;
- Restores rotating administrative support among the Police, Fire, Emergency Management, Law, and Health Departments rather than assigning permanent staffing responsibility to a single department; and

Commission Roles, Responsibilities and Authority

The S-1 more clearly defines the role of commissioners. Commissioners are not expected to serve as investigators or public safety experts. Rather, they are community members responsible for understanding how Anchorage's public safety systems operate, listening to community perspectives, identifying opportunities for improvement, and making recommendations that strengthen those systems over time. It also establishes expectations that the commission will develop an annual work plan identifying priority topics, setting annual goals, outlining priority presentations and other information to request from departments and be delivered throughout the year in meetings, community engagement activities, system reviews and upcoming policy reviews by the departments. This planning process is intended to promote thoughtful, proactive work while maintaining flexibility to address emerging issues.

Just as importantly, the S-1 further clarifies the commission's limitations. The commission is authorized to gather information, engage with the community, review public safety systems, receive presentations, and make recommendations for improvement.

Consistent with the original and S versions, the commission does not:

- Conduct investigations;
- Exercise subpoena authority;
- Review individual personnel matters;
- Interfere with active investigations; or
- Direct departmental operations.

Relationship with the Assembly Audit Committee

The S-1 proposes a stronger, more specific relationship between this commission and the Assembly Audit Committee.

Rather than conducting investigations itself, the commission may identify areas where an audit, evaluation, or independent system review would be beneficial and recommend those topics for consideration by the Audit Committee during development of its annual work plan.

Following completion of an audit or review, the commission may receive presentations on the findings, gather community feedback, and make recommendations regarding implementation. This approach creates an accountability pathway and allows for direct coordination and discussion with the Assembly on matters the commission feels is important to address over time, while preserving the commission's advisory role and avoiding investigative responsibilities.

Community Engagement

The S-1 strengthens expectations regarding community engagement.

The commission is expected to engage the community through listening sessions, surveys, public meetings, outreach efforts, and presentations from community organizations. These activities are intended to ensure community experiences consistently inform discussions about Anchorage's public safety system. There is value in regularly inviting community organizations to present to the commission, so commissioners have a deeper understanding of what is happening throughout the community and the challenges people are experiencing, and can strengthen ties between groups across the community while encouraging participation in this effort.

When significant community concerns arise, the commission provides a forum for thoughtful discussion of broader system issues and potential improvements rather than serving as a venue for reviewing individual incidents. This commission is not envisioned to be specifically reactive to or make judgments on critical incidents. However, it is anticipated that over time, and reviewing information about prior reports and investigations, the commission may be able to focus discussion on common themes, process improvements, or proposed policy changes to consider.

Membership

The sponsors intend for the commission to reflect the diversity of Anchorage and include a broad range of lived experiences and perspectives.

Appointments should consider geographic representation, demographic diversity, age, cultural background, professional experience, and lived experience with different components of the public safety system. The ordinance also recognizes the value of members with expertise in behavioral health, crisis response, youth services, victim advocacy, housing, public health, education, and other community-based fields that intersect with public safety.

The sponsors continue to believe it is appropriate to limit representation by current and former public safety professionals and their immediate family members. Those perspectives remain important and should be represented on the commission; however, the commission is intended primarily to reflect community perspectives while ensuring public safety experience remains part of the discussion.

Furthermore, the sponsors considered the benefits and downsides of having a commission composed of a number of designated seats, which is often proposed in the course of discussion about creating an advisory body like this one. Ultimately the approach the sponsors took is similar to that of the Anchorage Child Care and Early Education (ACCEE) Fund Board, which has limits on the total number of seats that can be filled by a certain perspective (providers, parents, etc.) but does not have singular designated seats for each. While this leaves more discretion to future mayors and assemblies to change the composition over time, the limits proposed are designed to prevent an over-representation of one group, and encouraging applicants be considered holistically and in context of who is already serving on the commission at the time a vacant seat is up for appointment. Having flexibility in seats for commission members also reduces the risk of having a specialized seat that is difficult to find suitable qualifications for.

Conclusion

Overall, the S-1 reflects a model that is different from what either end of the spectrum originally envisioned. It is neither an investigative commission with oversight authority nor the absence of a commission. Instead, it establishes a permanent, community-led Public Safety Partnership that creates an ongoing forum for learning, dialogue, transparency, community engagement, and continuous improvement across Anchorage's public safety system.

If implemented well, the commission can become a lasting part of how Anchorage approaches public safety and look ahead toward positive systems and policy changes. It creates a consistent process for bringing together community perspectives and public safety expertise, identifying opportunities for improvement, and strengthening the systems that keep Anchorage safe over time.

The sponsors believe this approach reflects the extensive conversations held over the past year and provides a balanced framework that will allow the commission to evolve alongside the community's public safety needs.

We request your support for the ordinance.
