A Hometown Story: EverGreen Nursery

EverGreen Nursery has been offering a green waste recycling option for the past four years, diverting more than 5,000 cubic yards of green waste. In 2010, EverGreen Nursery became Alaska's first ever U.S. Compost Council (USCC) certified STA (seal of testing assurance) recycler. EverGreen Nursery's compost was used in AKDOT highway projects for erosion control that require high-quality USCC certified compost. It also was used in a major salmon stream diversion project.

EverGreen Nursery has launched a new product using 100% recycled materials from its green waste program for erosion control at construction projects. Silt socks were used on the midtown WalMart renovation and the new Providence Hospital M Tower construction sites in Anchorage. These socks use material generated from the green waste program, are less costly, and are easier to maintain than other erosion-control systems.

These service providers also offer curbside recycling collection for recyclables. You use your own containers and most materials need to be separated.
