

LINDSAY DAVISON

Organization Representative

Lindsay Davison, Independent Living Advocate Access Alaska

Lindsay Davison is currently an Independent Living Advocate for Access Alaska. Her position allows her to help individuals who experience disabilities to live as independently as possible in the community of their choice. Growing up as a child with disabilities she learned very early on how to advocate for not only herself but others. Professionally she has over 16 years of experience serving those with intellectual disabilities. This includes but is not limited to being a Life Coach for the West Virginia Rehab Center which allowed her to work with the deaf population, a Chapter Leader of West Virginia Adapt for 5 years (an advocacy group for people with disabilities of all kinds), a member of the Alaska Deaf Council and Behavioral Modification Specialist for Focus. She currently lives in Chugiak with her husband and 3 young sons and enjoys spending time with her family, playing with her sons and living a “normal life.” One of her favorite saying is “If I can do it, you can do it too, we just may have to find a way.”
