

Microtransit Zone - Northeast Anchorage

The intent of this service is to provide access and connection to the areas of Northeast Anchorage that have historically not had good quality fixed route bus service. Multiple iterations of bus routes have been attempted to connect people in Northeast to the bus system on major roads. This attempt, at a new type of transit services for Anchorage, is another method of providing access and connections to the transit system, without having big buses come through smaller neighborhood roads. Having the ability to connect people to the fixed route bus system, or connections within the zones, increases the usefulness of Public Transit.

Microtransit: zones are areas where individuals can access first/last mile connections to the fixed route bus system, while also allowing for rides within the zone in an individualized method. This is a shared ride experience, using apps and/or phones requesting rides like Uber/Lyft, and is more of a door to door experience. This potentially can serve more people that don't live within walking distance to a fixed bus route on dedicated streets.
